A Judge Commends Pure Food

A judge of a Colorado court said: "Nearly one year ago I began the use of Grape-Nats as a food. Constant confinement indoors and the monotonous grind of office duties had so weakened and impaired my mental pawers that I felt the imperative need of something which neither doctors nor food apecialists seemed able to supply. "A week's use of Grape-Nuts twice each day convinced me that some unusual and marvelous virtue was contained therein. My mental vigor returned with astonishing rapidity: Frain weariness (from which I had constantly suffered) quickly disappeared; of thought and intellectual health and activity which I had never previously known were to me the plain results of a few moness' use of this food. hest atingly I commend the most remarkable food preparation which so nee has ever produced so far as my kno ledge and experience extends." "Dress Carriages" Next.

There is every indication of an early revival of the luxurious and costly dress carriage which was such a conspicuous and picturesque feature during the early days of Victoria's reign. At the present time andaus and broughams are the vehicles chiefly used by the nobility for state occasions, but since King Edward's accession they have fallen into disfavor. The King himself is known to have expressed his dissatisfaction with the fact that the somewhat sombre carriages which are driven up to Buckingham Palace for the drawing rooms are in many instances the identical ones used in the daytime for shop-ping purposes, and his Majesty has quietly intimated a wish that dress carriages ipage. Its body is h a most elegant equ on C-springs and braces; at each of the top corners is a coronet; a gaudy hammer-cloth covers the coachman's box; the whole vehicle is painted in the family colors; gold and silver plating are there in abundance, and the inside is gorgeous with brocaded silk. The cost? Well, it depends entirely Miss Mayme Summerville last week..... on the length of the purse. You can pay as much as you like for a dress carriage, but not less than $2,500. In the early days andria, visited Mr. and Mrs. Omar Wil-The judge is right. READING IN BED.

A Receipt Telling Exactly How Not to Do It.

Brooklyn Eagle.

The doctors will tell you that reading in ped is a bad practice, and so it is if you do it in a catch-as-catch-can way. But done most healthful of exercises, especially for those secentarily inclined. I myself have read in bed these many years, and I believe my fine physical condition is due as much to this practice as to any other cause. But have a carefully devised system to which adhere with unemitting persistence. I never read in bed by gaslight. The flicker is bad for the eyes even if tha bracket is located in the right place, which seldom is. I prefer a kerosene lamp placed on a small table beside my bed. After standing my pillow on end to raise my head to the proper position I draw the covers well up and tuck them closely under my chin. Then I insert my arms in my "nightingale," an ingenious device which a feminine friend recently made to take the garment which I formerly used for the protection of my arms and shoulders. Now, having arranged myself with due regard for my health and comfort, I suddenly remember that I have not wound the clock. So I undo my swathings and bounce place of the old pair of trousers or kindred

When I am once more carefully tucked under the covers I begin to feel an irresistible desire to smoke. Somehow at this particular time more than at any other the pipe seems to be the fitting companion to the book. So I hop out of bed again and feel my way down the dark hall to my study, where my smoking materials are kept. Variety is lent to this performance according to the number and character of articles against which I stub my toes and bat my shins. But it all accelerates thought and induces a free flow of language, which is one of the incidental purposes of reading in bed. Having lighted my pipe and returned to the adjustment of my pillow and coverings, I am prepared for the real enjoyment of my favorite author. I take the book from the table (I sometimes vary this by getting up and going to the library for it) and ter. Then I find I have left my reading glasses somewhere, I do not know where, For minutes I try to think where I last used them. I recall that I had them on when I looked over the evening newspaper after dinner. I have a hazy recollection of taking them off just before I spread my wings and flew to the tip of the church steeple. I dimly, very dimly remember hanging them on a horn of the moon as I passed on my way to keep a tryst with Venus, and then-Then I awake sufficiently to see that the lamp has burned low and to smell that it is out of oil. I usually retain consciousness long enough to put out the light and to reflect that reading in bed is an exhilarating and at the same time a soporific practice, furnishing both excellent exercise to the muscles and soothing employment to brain,

New York Press. It is a great enterprise and a paying one to build homes for the people, small cottages in the suburbs where the clerk on $3,000 a year and less can pay down $300 cash and then stagger along on the installment plan till bled to death and the grave. One of our more prosperous promoters of this line of business gave me a tip yesterday that looks like a solemn, gospel truth. Said he: "The main thing in building a cheap cottage in the outskirts is to have what the women call a 'lovely bathroom.' When we've got that the sale is easy. A cheap bathroom will never sell a house; it will, on the contrary, spoil the sale. The parlor may be common enough, but that can be concealed with nice furniture and tidies and bric-a-brac and carpets, pictures and cozy corners, etc. The dining room can be made attractive with china closets, a buffet, plenty of chairs, chafing dishes, fancy plaques and a hundred kinds of cheap or costly glassware, The living rooms-any old thing, a bed or two, a lounge, bureau, dressing case, chiffonier, etc. But the bathroom must be its natural self. It is the first thing that appeals to woman-a nice woman, and nearly all women are nice."

A thumb nail caused him similar disquiet. Dr. Abernethy, a man proverbially intolerant of mere fads and crotchets, had yet a strong personal objection to sleeping in

Free-Ticket Fiend. Philadelphia Record

A pronounced trait of the American people is the overwhelming desire to get something for nothing, and especially is this true of free passes to any sort of show. People who are amply able to purchase tickets seem to think it the acme of delight to avoid paying for this sort of enjoyment, and in the matter of circus tickets the thing amounts to a perfect mainia. A great many people have an idea that every newspaper man is going around with his pockets laden with them, or that all he has to do is to make a modest request for a dozen or so, and they will be promptly forthcoming. In the matter of theater tickers any manager can tell of people who would spend a $5 bill for dining or wining in order to secure the coveted bit of pasteboard, valued at the box-office at $1.50. The dea seems to be that a man who gets free tickets must be a personage of some im-portance, and the "grafters" want to be regarded in that light.
